Carmel School Periled By Fire

The Mt. Carmel Academy, a school maintained by the Sisters of Notre Dame on the highway and Brewster street, was endangered by flames Monday. A fire orginating with an overheated heating plant, spread rapidly beneath the large frame building, while a draft created by a large ventilating fan drove the flames throughout the building.

The fan was put out of commission by the firemen, and the flames then yielded to the water applied to them. The fire was extinguished before any great amount of damage could be done to the building.

The school is a large two-story building of wooden construction and is connected with the Mt. Carmel church and with the parsonage. It was stated by Chief Mark Ryan of the fire department, that had the flames had a little more headway the school and possibly one or both of the other buildings would have been destroyed.

The children in the school were rushed from the school in orderly manner as soon as the smoke was noticed.

HEARING HELD IN W. P. RAIL PERMIT CASE

Western Pacific Sure Of Securing Permit

The greatest confidence was expressed by officials of the Western Pacific as to the outcome of the hearing held yesterday in San Francisco of the application of that railroad for a permit to construct a line from this city to San Francisco. The hearing was held yesterday before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In speaking of the matter, Arthur Curtiss James, director of the Western Pacific, and reputed to be the largest owner of railroad stock in the world, is reported to have said:

"We have no fight with the Southern Pacific or Santa Fe," James said. "Opposition to the Western Pacific's plans was to be expected. But it is for California themselves to decide what they want and to determine if this opposition shall be strong enough to prevent the company from expanding in their state. If they prefer a railroad monopoly to active railroad competition I suppose we won't build. An dthat will be that. But somehow or other I don't think it will be that.

"As for the future plans of the Western Pacific, I think our project to build into the San Joaquin valley and down the peninsula speaks for itself. It will give a new gateway into San Francisco and open up new territory in the valley."

"There is room for three railroads in California, and the state is entering a period of tremendous development, with San Francisco the most strategic point."

President A. H. Adams of the Western Pacific, speaking in regard to the opposition of the other railroads to the Western Pacific project, stated:

"The Southern Pacific activities are so widespread that any extension of transportation service in the state must necessarily involve some conflict of interest with that company. That circumstance and the priority in point of time of one or the other of the oSuthern Pacific's activities should not be permitted to prevent a legitimate expansion of other transportation agencies whereby such means alone a competitive service can be afforded and where the new service has marked superiority in many respects.

"No carrier, not even the Southern Pacific, has a vested right as against a new and improved transportation service, regardless of its priority or the value of its investments. Growth of the territory we serve can only be accelerated by enabling the Western Pacific to strengthen its resources by following up natural avenues for increasing traffic and by insisting on maintaining the principles of competition.

"Now that we are going into Bakersfield, there is a report that we intend to invade Los Angeles territory. We have not even thought of it:"

The plans of the Western Pacific were reecntly announced as follows:

"The Western Pacific Railway embraces an independent, competing transcontinental railroad system operating a through route from San Francisco and Oakland via Stockton and Sacramento and thence via Marysville, Oroville and the Feather river canyon through Nevada to Salt Lake City, where it connects with the Denver & Rio Grande Western and the Union Pacific for eastern points, also with local Utah lines.

"The Western Pacific California Railway Co., recently incorporated, which is a subsidiary of the Western Pacific, proposes to construct a line of railroad from San Francisco to Redwood City, and from Nilegarden via Fresno to Kings river.

"Existing lines and branches of the Western Pacific in California are shown on the map in heavy black lines. The Sacramento Northern, Tidewater Southern and the Sacramento Short Line are indicated by the narrow black lines.

"The Central California Traction Railway is shown by an alternately blocked double line. A dash and dot line traces the Holland branch of the Sacramento Northern, now under construction. Broken lines indicate lines of railroad to be constructed as follows:

"Twenty-five miles by the Western Pacific California from San Francisco to Redwood City.

"One hundred thirty-eight miles by the Western Pacific California from Nilegarden via Fresno to Kings river.

"1.77 miles of belt line connections by the Western Pacific in Oakland and Alameda.

"3.5 miles by the Western Pacific from Brack, easterly.

"7.5 miles by the Sacramento Northern from a junction with its Holland branch to Ryde.

"7.5 miles by the Sacramento Northern from its Vaca Valley lines to Creed on the Sacramento Short Line.

"36 miles by the Sacramento Northern from a point near Willotta on its Vaca Valley line to Petaluma, this being contingent upon acquisition of the Petaluma & Santa Rosa Railway by the Western Pacific.

Steamer Line Operated

"Light lines show the Petaluma & Santa Rosa Railway, which also operate a steamer line between San Francisco and Petaluma, and the San Franciscofi Napa & Calistoga Railway.

"The Western Pacific, already heavily interested, has purchased one-half interest in the Alameda Belt Line and has made a contract to purchase the Union Belt Railway of Oakland. The Interstate Commerce Commission has heard the application for the necessary certificate of public convenience and necessity.

As the map is confined to Western Pacific lines in California it does not show its lines in Nevada or Utah nor does it show the connection which the Western Pacific is about to construct between its main line and the Oregon Short Line at Wells, Nev. This connection will afford in central California and points in Idaho and Montana."

While no definite announcement has been made regarding the location of the railroad's proposed activities in Redwood City, it is believed that they will be centered in the district now being opened up by the extension of Broadway.

D. R. Stafford, local realtor, who recently sold the Sweeny ranch east of town to a company of New York capitalists, stated yesterday that the Western Pacific holds a right-of-way across his tract between the tracks of the Southern Pacific and the route of the Bay Shore highway.

Continued, this right of way would cross the extension of Broadway, near the location of the Redwood City aviation field, and this is the most probable course of the railway, it is stated, as by a close approach to Redwood City at this point it will be possible to continue the line with a minimu mof bridging.

The general route of the road was outlined in a statement issued yesterday by President A. H. Adams of the Western Pacific. He said:

"We already have a temporary freight terminal at Eighth and Brannan streets, connecting with our Twenty-fifth street slip. Beginning at the terminal our Redwood City line will follow south across Islais creek, swinging around and across the edge of Hunters Pt. and continuing in a southerly direction across the San Francisco-San Mateo county line and into South San Francisco.

"Thence, our line will continue in a southeasterly direction through Burlingame and San Mateo and the projected Port of San Francisco into Redwood City.

"For much of the distance we hug the shore and a large section of the route is through marshy land. This will call for much trestle work but the territory is essentially fitted for industrial sites and it can be only a matter of a short time before it is all filled in.

Laying Steel Immediate Job

"Bridge and terminal construction are not included in the $13,500,000 set aside for the railroad construction, but our new subsidiary, the Western Pacific California Railroad Company. They will be provided for later. Our immediate big jobs are construction of the Redwood City line and our new line into Fresno and Bakersfield. Like the Western Pacific Railroad Company, our new subsidiary is a California corporation, and its directors will meet in San Francisco. Both corporations will devote their resources and energies in the state to the upbuilding of Central California. They will serve directly no part of the state other than that tributary or adjacent to San Francisco, Oakland and the bay district."

W. P. Plans Given Endorsements From County Governments

The proposed extension of the Western Pacific railway along the peninsula was this week given the endorsement of the boards of supervisors of both this county and San Francisco. The board of this county on Monday by resolution signified its approval of the plan for building a rail line into San Francisco.

The resolution passed by the San Mateo county board of supervisors was presented to that body at its meeting Monday by Charles Holt, chairman of the commitee recently appointed by the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce to secure the necessary endorsements to be presented at the hearing which was held yesterday before the Interstate Commerce Commission. It was adopted upon a motion by Supervisor Hickey of South San Francisco, and seconded by Supervisor Brown of San Mateo. The vote on the resolution was unanimous.

Fred H. Drake, president of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce spoke in favor of the development, as did also E. B. Hinman, president of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce; D. R. Stafford, city councilman of Redwood City; and C. H. Holt.

In the afternoon the same committee met with the San Francisco board of supervisors, and secured from that body a resolution endorsing the proposed Western Pacific development. The proposal had previously received the unqualified endorsement of 32 organizations on the peninsula, including practically every chamber of commerce and development body of the county.

The request of the Western Pacific for a certificate of necessity and convenience for the construction of a rail line from San Francisco to Redwood City was given a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission in San Francisco yesterday. The results of this hearing, however, may not be made known for six months or a year, according to President Adams of the Western Pacific Company, as the facts ascertained at the hearing must be submitted to Washington, and action taken there before anything definite will be known of the outcome of the hearing. A hearing was held in Fresno last week upon the application of the same railroad to build a line from its present transcontinental line at Nilegarden to Bakersfield.

It was also stated by President Adams that as soon as the certificate is granted by the commission that his company is ready to put a thousand men at work on the peninsula project.

The plans of the railroad mean much to this section, and the eRdwood City Chamber of Commerce has taken the lead in securing the whole-hearted support of the people of this section for the project. Following shortly upon the approval of the San Mateo and San Francisco county supervisors, a resolution was passed by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce. This last completed the list of endorsements desired by the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce for presentation at the hearing yesterday.

Where the New Road Will Run

Turkey Thieves Given 60 Days

Twenty-three turkeys stolen in November from the farm of Manuel Souza on Corte Madera creek, resulted Monday in the arrest of two San Gregorio boys in San Francsco. The boys are Louis Cardoza and Frank P. Alvis. They were arrested near Fifth street in San Francisco by Sheriff McGrath, Undersheriff Farrell and Constable Walter Moore of Pescadero.

It is charged that the boys took the birds from the Souza farm and sold 14 of them in San Francisco to a butcher at 25 cents a pound. Three of the turkeys were recovered alive and are being held at the county jail for evidence. The boys were given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Edward I. McAuliffe yesterday afternoon and were sentenced to terms of 60 days in the county jail.

Attorney Kirkbride Discusses Charter

Members and guests of the Redwood City Kiwanis club were given an interesting talk at the regular meeting of the club Wednesday by Attorney Charles Kirkbride of San Mateo. Attorney Kirkbride spoke one the proposed county charter. The speaker strongly favored the adoption of a charter form of government by this county. Kirkbride was introduced by Henry Witte, the chairman of the meeting.

The club voted unanimously in favor of a resolution present by Elmore B. Hinman, president of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce endorsing the proposed Western Pacific line through here. It also voted unanimously to sponsor a Boy Scout troop here. A committee of which John Gill was chairman, has been investigating the advisability of this move, and this committee gave a favorable report at Wednesday's meeting.

John Gill Named On County Board

John Gill, superintendent of the schools of Redwood City school district, was appointed a member of the county board of education by the board of supervisors of this county on Monday. He will succeed Roy W. Cloud, who has held the position for many years, but who was forced to resign due to the press of business in his new position as secretary of the aCliforia State Teachers' Association.

Damage Suit Filed Following Wreck

Suit to collct $803.17 for damages alleged to have resulted from an auto crash which occurred in South San Francisco last June, was filed this week in the court here by Robert Doble. The defendant it hne suit is G. B. Brouchou of San Francisco.

MENLO RECALL ELECTION ASKED OF STATE COURT

Wednesday afternoon the District Court of Appeals in San Francisco issued an alternative writ of mandate directed to the five trustees of the City of Menlo Park, directing them to appear before the court on January 28 to show cause, if any they may have, why they should not call an election for the recall of two members of the council as prayed for in a petition presented to the council some weeks ago. All the members were served with the writ on Wednesday eevning.

The case was brought to the court by K. L. Martin, through his attorneys, Kincaid & Fitzpatrick of Redwood City. When the case is called on the 28, a showing must be made as to the reason why the election was not called by the trustees and if no valid cause is presented the writ will be granted and the trustees directed to call the election.

If sufficienut cause is presented to the court showing the reason for not calling the election then the whole proceedings will be sent to Judge Buck, who will hear all testimony, sending his findings back to the higher court who will pass on them.

The trustees will hold its regular meeting on next Tuesday, at which time perhaps some action will be taken. Maybe they will call the election to avoid further complications. In all probability the case will be bitterly fought on both sides, as much feeling has developed in the proposed recall election at Menlo Park. It will probably be four months before an election will be called should the suit go to the supreme court, providing those seeking the recall are successful in their contention.

Workman Injured In Fall From Building

A fall from the roof of a house on which he was working, resulted Wednesday in a broken leg for Frank Schweikert of this city. Schweickert was working on the roof of a house on Oakdale avenue and Edgewood road for his father, F. X. Schweikert, plastering contractor. The injured man was attended by Dr. H. A. Clattenburg.

Exchange Club Talk Is On City Charter

A talk on Robert E. Lee was given by Carroll D. Hall. Francis Tinney was chairman of the meeting.

Prefers Men of His Own Style

WHETHER Tom Heeney, sturdy New Zealand fighter, who was the loser in Gene Tunney's last appearance as heavyweight champion, retires from the ring depends on his opponents more than anything else. Heeney said that he was very uncertain about continuing his ring career, but that he would like to keep on if he could fight only men suited to his particular style.

Tom Heeney.

"I want to fight some more and then again I don't," Heeney explained. "My wife wants me to get out while I am sound in body and mind. I feel that I've fought them all. There's no new ones around for me to tackle and I have a little money. I'd like to get into some business which would bring me a satisfactory income. That's one side of it.

"Yet I'd like to keep on if I could fight men suited to me and my style. I don't mean that I want to pick opponents. But what I mean is to fight men near my own size and more closely related to me in style, fellows like Sharkey, Risko, Paulino and Dempsey, any one of the four or all four of them. That would be better than if I fought somebody like Tunney, bigger than me and given to boxing rather than fighting."

Apparently discounting the possibility of wading through an elimination tournament to the heavyweight title, Heeney did not think much of the money to be won in the ring.

"I suppose I could earn about $40,000 in a year's fighting," he said. "And against this there is the idea of exposing yourself to injury."

Famous Virginia Place Made Into Golf Links

Golf balls instead of bullets now disturb the air around the famous Mannsfield Hall estate.

The historic Virginia mansion is now a country clubhouse, and the golf links mark the spot where Gen. Rufus Dawes, father of Vice President Dawes, led a charge against the Confederate lines. It will be included in the Fredericksburg and Spottsylvania County Battlefield park authorized by congress.

George Washington often roamed the terrain with his dogs when he was a small boy. The estate dates back into the Eighteenth century, although the present Mannsfield Hall was not erected until 1805. It forms an ideal site for the exclusive club, overlooking the Rappahannock river that flows only a stone's throw from the porch.

President Coolidge spoke from the porch of the old mansion when he dedicated the Battlefield park in October, when the first memorial was unveiled.

Wisconsin Threat

John Doyle, University of Wisconsin basket ball captain, can always be depended upon in a pinch. With a good eye for the basket, and being a capable floor worker, he is the key around which Coach Doc Meanwell builds his attack.

Prospective Regulars for Cleveland Indians

The addition of Tavener and Holloway gives the Cleveland Indians five new men, all of them prospective regulars. Averill and Porter are expected to fill center and right fields, Tavener will be considered the first string shortstop and Zinn and Holloway will be expected to take a more or less regular turn in the box.

Averill, Porter and Tavener all are left-handed hitters, which, if they make good, should mean a pretty steady bombardment of the right field wall in the Cleveland park. Hodapp, Lind and Luke Sewell will be the only right-handed batsmen in the lineup—not an unbalanced array when it is considered that there are no more than four star southpaw pitchers in the league.

Tavener, incidentally, is an Ohio boy. He was born in Celina in 1898 and his home now is in Dayton.

Holloway lives in Barwick, Ga., where he was born 31 years ago.

Whist Became Popular Under Name of Triumph

Like many card games, its origin is obscure, but under the name of "triumph" it had become so well known that when Bishop Latimer preached the Christmas sermon at Cambridge in 1529 he had no doubt that his hearers could follow his allegories based upon it. Its first serious study and the formulation of set rules regarding play resulted from frequent meetings of a party of whist players at the Crown Coffee house in Bedford Row London of whom Edmond Hoyle was one. From that time on the game has gained in popularity.

Robbie to Continue

All reports to the contrary, it now appears virtually certain that Wilbert Robinson, portly manager of the Brooklyn National league baseball club, will pilot the Robins through the perils of the 1929 season.

Published reports that Robinson would be relieved of his duties brought from Stephen W. McKeever a heavy stockholder in the club, a statement that Robinson and no one else would be manager of the Brooklyn club through 1929.

WANTS TENTH MAN ON LEAGUE TEAMS

Heydler's Plan Is Discarded by Americans.

Perhaps the most interesting proposal that has occurred in baseball circles for many years was that of President John A. Heydler, who wanted to inject a tenth man into each major league "nine," writes Wray of the St. Louis Post Dispatch. The American league rejected the proposal but it has interesting possibilities.

The tenth man was to take up the attacking duties of the pitcher, who thus would be able to conserve all his energies for defense. Under the plan the pitcher would not be removed merely to let a pinch hitter bat for him when the prospects of a score were good. The tenth man batting for the pitcher throughout the game, would take over all the batting and base running which the pitcher normally was called upon to do.

The mere proposal of such a plan suggests that the pitcher of today has degenerated into a mere shadow of his former greatness.

He is no longer a baseball player—just a thrower of baseballs, specializing in only one phase of the game's many requirements. One cannot but go back to the days when baseball was played much more whole-heartedly.

He would find a period when clubs carried only a couple of pitchers. When one of these was not pitching to the opposing team, he was playing the outfield. Pitchers could do things then. In a pinch they could play any old position.

Pitchers then did not have to be relieved in more than 50 per cent of their efforts, as is the case today. Charley Radbourne won ten successive games in 30 days.

The records of other days are filled with accounts of great pitchers who were also great hitters and who could field like shortstops or chase fly balls with the best of them.

The world knows about at least two of these who are still active—Babe Ruth and George Sisler.

If the specialization of the pitcher is to be continued to the point where he ceases to function as a baseball player, we might suggest that anyone of the mechanical curvers be employed to replace him, and thus save the expense of a high-class man.

King Brady Claims Born With Jinxes

King Brady, the Northwestern university trainer, claims he was born with more handicaps than Horatio Alger, Jr., ever was able to encumber any of his heroes with in Chapter I of the "Oblivion to Renown," series.

Weighing only three and one-half pounds at birth, Brady was cross-eyed, freckle-faced and left-handed. And if all that wasn't enough, his father wished the names of "Alexis Finch" on him a few hours later. Despite that combination of circumstances, King has risen to eminence in his chosen profession.

Professional Gridder Is Outclassed by Collegian

"College teams fight harder than the professional athletes," says Graham MacNamee.

"Football is recognized as college sport. I don't think the attempt to professionalize it will ever succeed to any great extent. It is ingrained in college life; it is hooked up in college tradition.

"If a professional football star has a chance to make a touchdown, but will run the risk of breaking his leg in the bargain, he will in all probability forego the opportunity. He gets his salary at the end of the week either way. The college fellow thinks of the glory in store for him. He's fighting for his alma mater, and he puts the best he has into his efforts.

"This example is very illustrative of the entire situation. The sportsmanship is there in both cases, but the college wins out every time in fighting and in fighting spirit."

Studies Our Sports

N. Paredes of Peru, who has come to the United States to make a thorough study of our system of coaching and training in all branches of athletics, has been impressed by what he has seen of American swimmers and divers. He says that though his country is just beginning to toddle in water sports, interest is keen already and he feels confident that strides will be made so soon as our methods are introduced and thoroughly understood by the athletes.

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys if Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

Upsetting the Balance

NATURE'S laws are laws of balance. Great forces are held in control by other forces. Planets are held in their orbits by two balanced forces. The forces of growth and decay each working against the other prevent the earth being a baron waste on one hand or an uninhabitable, impenetrable jungle on the other.

In its living creatures Nature has maintained its equilibrium also, or has done so until the inventions of man have intervened. The insect world has been for ages held to its proper place in the scheme of things by two other forces, reptiles and birds. Among the reptiles the toad was the chief exterminator of insects. Each night a toad would eat enough ants, grasshoppers, termites and other injurious insects to infest a city lot. But the automobile has made the toad almost extinct in most localities.

The birds also have been subjected to man's inventions and devices; killed by guns or driven away by the settling of the country, the birds no longer hold in check the thousands of insect pests found now on every side.

All of which would mean little to one who did not love the birds or the mild ambling toad. But it has a very vital angle, too, however. What the birds and the toads can no longer do must be done by man himself, and at large expense. In keeping down the ant pest alone the toad did a valuable service little appreciated while he was here, but whose lack is annually costing home owners and store keepers large sums for ant poisons.

The birds are less in number than formerly but they still perform a real service in keeping down pests. Every effort should be made to protect the birds which we still have with us. Every bird is a distinct asset to the community. Each has a real value, and should be protected.

A Tennessee statesman discovers that his state's anti-evolution law is "making monkeys out of Tennessee," and he moves for its repeal.

Bankitaly Profits Exceed $38,000,000

Bankitaly Corporation has earned profits in excess of $73,000,000 for the period from January 20 to the end of the year, it was revealed today when announcement was made that more than $38,000,000 have been earned since publication of the last statement, July 19. The report for the first part of the year, from January 20, to July 19, showed normal earnings of over $35,000,000 after setting up $13,000,000 reserves and liquidating $32,000,000 in bills payable. This makes 1928 the banner year in the history of the corporation.

Earnings have amounted to more than five times total dividend requirements, and in addition $59,000,000 has been set aside for surplus. Dividends including an extra payment of forty-four cents a share during the last quarter, totaled $14,000,000 or only one-quarter of the sum added to surplus. In addition, the stockholders have received 130,000 shares of Bank of America stock, equivalent to an extra dividend of $5.00 per share, making the total distribution per share $7.68 for the year.

Steps have been taken to liquidate Bankitaly Corporation, and merge its assets with those of National Bankitaly Company, to create the new $400,000,000 Bankitaly Company of America. The new company, together with the Bank of Italy, will have a combined capital investment of more than half a billion dollars. Bancitaly Corporation, which will now merge its identity with the larger institution into which its assets are converted, has made extraordinary profits during the ten years it has functioned. The report for its closing statement with current earnings of over $73,000,000 for the year, represents the most profitable period in the history of its operation.

Publication of the statement of Transamerica Corporation was made today, showing total assets in excess of one billion dollars. Capital stock amounts to $218,689,850, and surplus $874,759,400.

Principal holdings include stock in Bancitaly Corporation, Bank of Italy, Bankitaly Agricultural Credit Corporation, Bankitaly Mortgage Company, California Joint Stock Land Bank and Pacific National Fire Insurance Company. Steps have been taken to liquidate Bancitaly Corporation, and to merge its assets with those of National Bankitaly Company, in the formation of the new $400,000,000 Bankitaly Company of America. In consequence, Transamerica Corporation will receive stock in the new organization for its holdings of Bancitaly Corporation.

The total security holdings of Transamerica aggregate $1,091,507,537.26, the balance of its assets being entirely cash in banks. Liabilities are represented exclusively by capital and surplus.

A change in the dates of dividend payment for the corporation has been decided upon, it was announced although the distribution will continue on a quarterly basis. Dividends will be paid January 25, April 25, July 25 and October 25, to stockholders of record January 5, April 5, July 5, and October 5. The first dividend Transamerica will pay will be April 25, since the current distribution is being made of Bank of Italy and Bancitaly Corporation. The decision to vary from the usual dividend dates was made, in the belief that the result would prove more satisfactory, due to the fact that at the customary dividend periods the exchanges are taxed to capacity.

Announcement of the selection of the board of directors of the Corporation has been made by A. P. Giannini, president, revealing that there is the intention of continuing the administration in the hands of those who represent and have participated in the development of the several institutions affiliated with Transamerica.

Captain Jene Jordan's Sequoia Athletic Club unlimited basketball team was decisively defeated by the G. Rossi Florists five Monday evening at the St. Dominick gym by a 58 to 16 score. The game was played in San Francisco before a crowd of approximately 200 basketball fans.

The Rossi Florists are favored by many to win the Pacific Amateur Association basketball title this year and a trip to Kansas City to enter the national title play. The Sequoia Athletic Club team is entered in the P. A. A. play, but can hardly hope to cop the pennant against such competition as the Rossi Florists, Olympic Club, San Francisco Boys' Club, St. Ignatius, and even the San Jose Golds. In tournament play, two defeats will eliminate a team. The game Monday night was not a league game.

Johnnie Weir Scores

Johnnie Weir, Sequoia Club forward, was high point man for the local team with eight points to his credit. Weir scored all his points in the second half. In the first half, Jene Jordan did the heavy work for Redwood. Jene dropped three pretty shots through the hoop for six points. Collie Cofiori accounted for the other two points. Army Drivon played a dependable game at guard for Redwood, but the height of the Florist forwards was too great a handicap to overcome.

Feerick, former St. Ignatius center, was dropping the ball from all angles. He accounted for 16 points. Okerberg, his running mate, nosed him out for high point honors with a total of 17 points.

The Rossi Florists have a smooth working offense. They are particularly effective under the basket and in corner play. Each man on the Florist team is a star in his position. Sandoval, the other forward, excels at floor work. Mellano and Potts work well together as guards.

Game at Redwood

The Rossi Florists will be seen in action at the Sequoia court later in the season when they play the Athletic Club a return game. Coach L. Lodi is certain that the score will be closer than 58 to 16 in this second game.

The lineups: Rossi Florists—Feerick, Kotta, Sandoval, Okerberg, Mellana, Russo, Potts, and Garaventa. Sequoia Athletic Club—Weir, Jordan, Lawlor, Barbetti, Craig, Stewart, Cofiori, Gibson, and Drizon.

IMPROVEMENTS FOR MENALTO PARK SOON TO BEGIN

Last week the board of supervisors awarded a contract to Harvey Conner of Redwood City to install a water system in the Willow Road Water District and to put in a sewer system in Menalto Park. The amount of the contract is $39,099.50.

The district is the largest in the county comprising 600 acres. Menalto Park, the fastest selling subdivision in the state, comprises nearly one-fifth of the district.

Work on these improvements will be started within thirty days and pushed to a speedy completion.

Sparkling snow water from Hetch Hetchy will be brought to each lot in Menalto Park and sewer laterals laid alongside of each property line. It is the plan of the subdividers to put improvements in this tract that will surments in this tract that are expected to surpass those in any subdivision in the state. County Surveyor Geo. Kneese is to be in charge of the work and he will see to it that the contract will be carried out to the letter.

In any subdivision in the state, County Surveyor George Kneese is to be in charge of the work and he will see to it that the contract will be carried out to the letter.

An eight inch main is to be laid through the tract and laterals brought to each lot. The large outfall sewer installed some years ago by the North Palo Alto Sanitary district will be used in bringing laterals to each lot.

The large Hetch Hetchy pipe is adjacent to the tract. It now connects with the Calaveras Dam but will hook on to the pipes from the Sierras when they are brought down to the east bay section, which will be in about three years. Thus will the residents of Menalto Park be furnished with sparkling water from the snowy regions of the north before the citizens of San Francsco are supplied. No doubt all of this growing section, including Palo Alto and Stanford University, will use the system and be supplied with ample water.

The installation of this water system means a great deal to this section as it is certain of ample water for all purposes at reasonable rates. Wells that have furnished water in the past are going dry so that the property owners will have to depend almost entirely on Hetch Hetchy which system will have an abundance of water regardless of dry winters. This is certainly a boon to property owners.

Work on the Bayshore Boulevard, which passes through Menalto Park, is to start this year from Redwood City and to be constructed through to the Embarcadero Road in Palo Alto. With the construction of this boulevard, the completion of the contemplated improvements and the possible building of the Western Pacific Railroad across the bay Menalto Park is sure to boom.

WOODSIDE

Eight years ago Mrs. F. E. Abecassis left her home here for a trip to Europe, expecting to be gone two years. She leased her property for that period to Nat T. Messer. But Mrs. Abecassis did not return when she expected and Mr. Messer continued in his tenancy. Now she is on her way from Europe and the Messers moved back to San Francisco last week.

Mr. George Givens was summoned to Oklahoma on Sunday because of the serious illness of his mother. He expects to be gone about two weeks.

Mrs. Virginia Miller and son, who went to Long Beach a short time ago, are visiting with her grandmother, Mrs. Rebecca Bogle.

John M. Randall, a resident of Woodside for many years and often seen driving his old bay mare along the country roads, was taken suddenly ill and removed to the hospital last week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Audiffred gave a dinner party last Sunday. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jacques and Mrs. Schmidt of Berkeley, Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Von Savoye and Raymond Von Savoye of Redwood City and Mr. and Mrs. John D. Gish of Woodside.

Jacques Audiffred, the son, celebrated his birthday with a party given to sixteen of his schoolmates on January 4th.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling have been spending several days at their home here.

The sympathy of the community is offered to George Doig whose father died very suddenly last week at Runnymede.

George Hotaling, who recently purchased the Russel Slade home here, has begun extensive improvements upon the property.

Woodside's population is diminishing. Harry Nicodemus, for many years proprietor of the Woodside Inn, whose chicken dinner have delighted thousands, has leased the Alpine Lodge near La Honda and will remove to his new location on Monday. It is rumored that the Inn will be moved from its present location and a new store building erected on the site for Neuman Brothers.

Mrs. George Dirks and family are also leaving for Washington, where her oldest son, Clarence, is attending the University of Washington. It is expected that the family will make its home in Seattle.

The Woodside Girl Scouts were entertained at the home of Mrs. George Givens on Monday last.

The Parent-Teacher Association held its regular meeting on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Owens of San Mateo, for many years prominent in P. T. A. Work, was the speaker.

Mrs. H. McDonald Spencer and her daughter, Miss Mary Virginia Spencer, left on Saturday for Italy and will be gone indefinitely. They returned to California two years ago after a long absence and have been living at Woodside. For a number of years they made their home in Florence and Miss Spencer was educated there.

Honeymoon Continued After Bride's Arrest

A honeymoon, interruped by the arrest of the bride, was continued this week by Mr. and Mrs. Charles DuVal, 18, of San Francisco. The married life of the couple began on Friday when they were married at the city hall in San Francisco. On Monday the mother, Mrs. Laura Leggett, of Daly City, obtained a warrant from Judge Buck for the arrest of the girl, charging that she was under age and was not in proper company.

The girl was taken from the home of her husband by San Francisco authorities, and later brought to the detention home here. On Wednesday the mother appeared before Judge Buck and asked that the girl be released.

"I want my girl to be happy," she declared. "Please dismiss the charges."

Mother and daughter embraced.

"I forgive you, mamma," said the bride, "but you know I'm 18. Meet my husband."

Mr. and Mrs. Charles DuVal, Sr., parents-in-law of the bride, witnessed the wedding of the couple and approved it. They battled valiantly to have the girl released from the detention home during her imprisonment.

County Recorder and Mrs. T. C. Rice received the news of the birth in Los Angeles on Wednesday of a seven-pound baby girl to the wife of their son, Kenneth Rice. The father is a pilot on one of the 12-passenger planes running between Los Angeles and Oakland.

MENLO PARK

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cooper have moved into their home here having left Sonora where Mr. Cooper was engaged in the garage business for over a year. Mr. Cooper has launched into a similar business at Mountain View. He will reside in Menlo Park.

The dial telephone system has been installed in Menlo Park. It is an up to date method of transmission and quite progressive and popular. However, the changed is tinged with some regret and no little sorrow for the installation of the new system means that several young ladies will lose their positions. Perhaps some widowed mother will be without an income, maybe some young man going thru college with the assistance of a sister or wife employed in the telephone office will be compelled to forego his education and no doubt some young lady with a fiancee will use less silk stockings and will skimp in her expenditures for dress and perk little bonnets. New inventions are throwing thousands out of employment. The merging of big business is also playing havoc with those who have to earn their daily bread. The future for the boy and girl of today is not very roseate. The professions are crowded, so that only the super-man is successful. It is true that other fields of endeavor are opening, such as the radio and aviation, but withal the young man will have a strong competition on life's road unless he is a university graduate or possesses some special gift. Why worry about these things? There is an allwise providence that takes care of such emergencies. He has done so since the world began and will continue to do so. Why worry.

Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., left last week for Washington, reaching the capitol in time to hear his distinguished father deliver his famous speech in the senate on the Kellogg Peace Pact, which passed the senate on Tuesday with a big vote. The address was the best ever heard in the upper house. It had much to do with the vote on the question. Young Shortridge goes to Washington on legal business. He will return in a few weeks.

The duck season closed on Tuesday after a successful three months' hunting. While the birds are quite scarce on the local marsh yet some good bags were taken. Those fortunate in owning preserves had splendid shooting.

The rain of the storm of Tuesday amounted to .47 inch making a total of 5.17 inches for the season. The rainfall at this time last year was 5.63 inches.

The pine and cypress trees in the Laurel Court estate are being cut down making a clearing in the jungle of oaks and other variety of trees. In other days Edgar Mills and his interesting family enjoyed the shade of these monarchs. Here Ogden Mills, son of the late D. O. Mills, and now first assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew Mellon, spent his boyhood. Henry Meyers, who planted the trees in the late sixties, has long since passed beyond the echoes. Under their foliage Mr. Gansel, the German Consul, enjoyed his afternoon siesta after partaking of sparkling champagne. He maintained a veritable Monte Carlo here. The winnings at the tables running up into the thousands. Gansel's rich friends would gather at the estate, spending days and dollars there before returning to San Francisco. Gansel was liberal in his entertainment of friends. This event was, of course, before Volstead had made his appearance in the country. These mute trees, like the one who planted them, will soon be no more, but O, if they could only speak, what tales they could tell of the revelry that took place beneath their protecting folds in the days of long ago.

E. M. Rankin has sold two pieces of property on Fremont avenue to T. B. Mountanos, a San Francisco newspaperman, who is to erect a handsome residence at once. He contemplates establishing a paper in Menlo Park.

Miss Josephine F. Carroll, a resident of this section for the past four months, passed away at the home of her sister, Mrs. Charles De Lacey, Tenthe avenue, last Saturday. The deceased was a native of California, aged 48.

The Menlo Park Parent Teacher Association met in the Central school house Friday, Jan. 11. It was decided to have an afternoon card party in the near future—the time and place to be decided by the committee in charge. The February meeting of the P. T. A. will be held on Founders' Day and a special program will be rendered. All members should make a special effort to be there.

Cities and Counties Split Over Use of State Road Money

By ESTO BROUGHTON
Staff Correspondent

Sacramento, Jan. 18, (CNB)—An internecine warfare has broken out today in the State Legislature between the rural cities and the rural counties over the division of the spoils in the case of the state road money in which the city of Redwood City is lined up in opposition to the County of San Mateo.

The financial rivalry betwixt city and county has put their legislators, Senator George Cleveland and Assemblyman Harry L. Parkman, in a quandry, forced to act as referee, for the cities of California are demanding that the legislators compel the counties to divy up with them a portion of their road money received from the state.

Legislation backed by the California League of Municipalities, representing every city in the state, provides for the allocation to municipalities of a portion of the state gasoline tax and license fee money now distributed to the counties.

Claiming that the boards of supervisors have not expended a fair proportion of the road funds for the improvement of city streets within rural cities, and that the financial burden of keeping up not only municipal streets but county thoroughfares through the towns has fallen upon city taxpayers, the [illegible] municipalities is preparing a concerted drive on the [illegible] for relief.

Charging that because [illegible] members of the boards of [illegible] ors throughout the state [illegible] from the unincorporated [illegible] the counties, they are [illegible] ed in expending road [illegible] highways outside of cities, the League is prepared to [illegible] by law to set aside a [illegible] portion of the funds for [illegible] streets.

A lively battle on the [illegible] anticipated after the [illegible] the Legislature between [illegible] Supervisors' Association [illegible] to take issue with the [illegible] tion and vigorously [illegible] League's proposal.

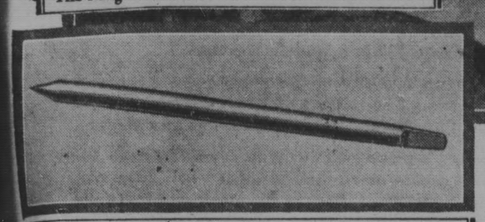
New Type of Magnetic Probe A Valuable Aid to Physicians

Scientists Have Developed a Small Permanent Magnet of Unusual Strength for Use of Practitioners

The Magnetic Probe Pulls Out a Steel Sliver



A Magnetic Probe Several Times as Strong as the Best Permanent Magnets Heretofore Available.

One of the First Electro-Magnets for Removing Iron Particles From the Eye-1900

By J. O. PERRINE

THE humanitarian spirit of the telephone's inventor, Alexander Graham Bell, which marked his lifelong activity in behalf of those with lost or impaired hearing, has frequently been reflected in many of the auxiliary products of telephone development. From the research of the Bell System scientific laboratories and co-operating medical experts have come the electrical stethoscope, the artificial larynx, the audiometer and aids to the deaf. Now comes another humanitarian instrument—the magnetic probe. It has nothing to do with telephony, as such, but is a by-product of developments in the manufacture of telephone apparatus. It is a beneficent instrument, made available to physicians for the removal of steel slivers from the skin or the eye without the necessity of surgery.

Magnets Everywhere

Magnetic instruments play many and conspicuous roles in everyday life. Perhaps the oldest magnetic instrument is the compass needle of the navigator. For many centuries compasses have pointed the direction for the helmsman as he guides his vessel to the far corners of the earth over the seven seas. The inductor compass, more recently developed, was used by Lindbergh on his heroic flight across the Atlantic. Like the compass needle, it also depends on the earth's magnetism, although in a different manner. The telegraph sounder is another magnetic instrument, as is the telephone receiver. A magnet in some form or another is an indispensable part of electric bells, induction coils, magnetos for automobile ignition and countless other appliances used daily. Strong electromagnets are an essential part of the great generators of electricity which light our homes and drive street cars and trains. Great masses of iron are lifted by electromagnets of special design in the iron and steel mills of the country. Sometimes magnets of similar design are mounted on the rear of auto trucks and supported close to the surface of the road. As they pass slowly along the motor highway, nails and all sorts of sharp-cornered pieces of iron fly to the tight embrace of the magnet. With the road thus swept with a magnetic broom, the distressing experience of a puncture is less likely to delay the motorist on his week-end trip.

Physicians' Use of Magnets

For sometime a similar sort of magnet, namely the electromagnet, has aided the physician in removing iron or steel particles embedded in the skin or muscular tissue, or in the eye. Just as nails on the highway are lifted up and even pulled out of the asphalt of the public highway, so the tiny steel slivers slowly but surely are pulled out of the hand or the eye-ball. The strange and ever marvelous force exerted by the magnet extracts a tiny piece of iron with deft and invisible fingers.

Heretofore, permanent magnets, that is, a bar of iron alone, could not be made strong enough to do the trick. Ordinary horseshoe magnets and bar magnets, of course, pick up iron, but for the purposes of the physician they did not exert sufficient pull. So the electromagnet had to be used; that is, a bar of iron was put inside a coil of wire connected to an electric battery. By increasing the electric current the pull could be made stronger and stronger. These electromagnets were big and heavy and awkward to handle. Necessarily, the patient had to be brought to the magnet. The magnet could not readily be taken to the patient. The need for a small, handy form of magnet, with a lot of pull, was a frequent topic of discussion among physicians and first-aid specialists.

New Magnetic Material

The development engineers of the Western Electric Company, which manufactures telephone apparatus for the Bell System, had been studying magnets and magnetic materials for many years. Magnets, all sorts of magnets, small and big, permanent and electro, strong and weak, are to be found in the telephone system in more than the proverbial thousand and one places. Obviously, these engineers knew considerable about magnets and magnetic materials. Following the suggestions made by medical advisers as to the size and shape of the proposed probe, these researchers produced a magnet with two and a half times as much pull as the strongest permanent magnet previously possible. Of course, the secret of the achievement is the material comprising the magnet, namely, cobalt steel. Cobalt is a chemical element, and with iron and nickel comprises the more magnetic materials found in Nature. Cobalt, however, does not exhibit magnetic properties in so high a degree as iron. However, at times, Nature can be beaten at her own game, and using a mixture, an alloy of cobalt and steel, a magnetic material was discovered which has most extraordinary magnetic properties. Permanent magnets of unusual strength resulted.

The New Magnetic Probe

With this new cobalt steel magnet a probe about the length and diameter of an ordinary pencil was designed. One end is flattened for use in extracting bits of iron from cuts while the other end is pointed like a sharpened pencil for particular application in eye cases.

The first aid specialist and the physician are now able to add a new instrument to their healing kits. A hard and lifeless piece of iron thus serves as a great boon to the injured. Cobalt steel is not found in the natural state, but emerged from the scientific laboratory as a result of unremitting labor and study by those who were zealous in research.

Water and Taxes Are Discussed At Legislature

By LAWRENCE MONFORT
(Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 16 (CNB)—Finding its stride after nearly a week of organization formalities, the California 1929 Legislature today is definitely embarked on a program of which tax revision, water development, several plans of farm relief and a closer coordination of governmental activities for economy's sake are major issues.

And behind these, with promise of taking equal rank in the parade of legislative shaws and realities, appear another formidable group of proposals with the solid backing of administration forces, including constitutional revision, survey of county roads looking toward inclusion of a number in the state highway system, investigation incident to slashing interest rates on irrigation and reclamation district bonds and of tightening legal screws to make crime an unprofitable business in the state.

Assured by Governor Young that as a whole, California is enjoying prosperity despite seven years of agricultural depression, legislators are giving respectful consideration to his viewpoint that the state has one of the worst constitutions yet written in the Union, and that fewer laws should be introduced and passed.

Livelier interest is apparent in the Executive's declaration that thorough investigation of irrigation district finances is needed and that a cut of one per cent in interest rates on such district bonds would save to California farmers in excess of $1,000,000 annually. That recommendation, proponents of the administration program predicted today, will go through without delay, especially in view of saving of a million dollars or more to agriculturalists embraced in the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers reclamations projects through activities of the Young administration in refunding these projects.

Legislators, with details of the $41,000,000 road-building program furthered to date in the current biennium freshly in their minds, are showing especial interest in Governor Young's direction to B. B. Meek, head of the public works department, to conduct a survey of all county roads looking toward their inclusion in the state system. Such of these roads as are more largely devoted to state than local uses clearly have priority of right for inclusion in the state network, the Governor believes. He will not, however, restrict the surveyor to these roads, but directed Meek to include all county highways which show any probability of becoming important arterials.

Trend of agricultural legislation already has developed definitely toward better control of marketing, either through state supervision or by granting official powers to cooperatives representing a majority of an industry in its own locality, strengthening of plant and livestock quarantine and pest control laws, and improvement of agricultural standards.

With a marked improvement in the farmer's position established during the past year, Governor Young's attitude, as reflected by his closest supporters, is for friendliest interest in the several major cooperative experiments now being conducted such as in the grape, peach and other fruit industries. Any proposals likely to brin gabout greater unification of effort of peach, grape or other growers for better marketing conditions is expected to have solid administration support.

The legislator will be asked, also, to take the state definitely out of the colonization business, probably thru purchase of lands or some other means of indemnification of colonists at Delhi or Durham. This action the Governor has specifically requested.

The administration will ask grouping of the veterans' welfare board, Women's Relief Corps Home, Yountville Veterans' Home, the State Athletic Commission and the National Guard into a new department, headed by the adjutant-general, who would sit with nine other directors as members of the Governor's council. Other departments it is proposed to create, include one of Penology, with divisions of criminology, criminal identification, a women's prison board, the advisory pardon board and a division dealing with criminal aspects of the narcotic situation; one of the professional and vocational standards and still another combining bureaus in direct relationship with business, such as banking, insurance, real estate, corporations and the like.

Three Fined For Liquor Selling

Three persons were fined amounts totaling $1,550 in the court of Justice of the Peace Edward I. McAuliffe last week on charges of violating the Wright act and of possessing slot machines. Those fined were George Knapp, Anna Peterson and Pete Martel.

Knapp was fined $500 for violation of the Wright act, Mrs. Peterson was fined $500 for the same offense and $50 for possession of slot machines, and Martel was fined $500 for violation of the Wright act.

In the establishment operated by Knapp, just south of Redwood City, the officers reported that liquor was found concealed in small compartments concealed beneath movable shelves. In Mrs. Peterson's place on Menlo Avenue, liquor was found under a trap door in the bedroom hidden beneath a rug. Martel's place is in Beresford.

GYMNASTIC REVIEW

Another all student production, taking in all the girls of the high school is scheduled to come off Saturday night, January 19, in the gym.

The production is in the nature of a review of all the work done by the girls in their physical education classes this year, and will cover a variety of topics such as dancing, both group and solos, tumbling by the girls' tumbling club, volley ball games, squad cometition, and mass marching.

An admittance charge of 25 cents will be asked, the money going to the support of the athletic fund for the girls. Miss Irene Bradley, head of the girls' physical education department, with Miss Mildred Brown and Mrs. Genevieve Robertson, is putting over the affair, and every girl taking physical education is participating in it.

BASKETBALL

Friday night, January 11, the 130 and varsity basketball teams play Palo Alto on the Altans new gym in the first league game of the season.

In the game played with Salinas during the Christmas vacation, the Purple and White defeated the Cowboys by the scores of 13-7 and 31-9 respectively, and the outlook for the season is consequently of a hopeful nature.

The first league game to be played on the home court is scheduled to come off Friday night, January 18, and is with San Mateo.

SOPH DANCE

The annual dance given by the sophomore class is coming off this Saturday night, at 8:00 o'clock. The theme of a cold winter, furnishes navel decorations, and the customary admission of 50 and 25 cents is asked.

SIXTY-FIVE YEARS OF LOCOMOTIVE GROWTH

120 feet in length

29½ feet in Length

"My! What a big boy my great grandson grew up to be!" said the "C. P. Huntington," otherwise "Southern Pacific No. 1," when it came out of retirement to pose beside one of the Southern Pacific's new giants of the rail just placed in service. Grandpop weighs 90,000 pounds. Grandson tips the scales at 906,900 pounds. Quite a difference, but it represents 65 years of locomotive development on Southern Pacific Lines.

LIKE father like son" may fit in the human race but it won't work in railroad locomotive circles. And when it comes to grandsons and great grandsons, blood relations in the "iron horse" family pass for perfect strangers.

More and more the likeness between the old and new is passing, until today it's a wise locomotive that recognizes its progeny and a wiser engine that knows its parents!

Which is introductory to announcement that the Southern Pacific Company has just placed in service ten of the largest and most powerful locomotives ever operated over its lines.

Although they are lineal descendants of the pioneer woodburner "C. P. Huntington," known as Southern Pacific No. 1, the new oil-burning mastodons of railroad motive power bear little resemblance to their great grandfather.

How times and appearances have changed since the first locomotive was shipped around the Horn in 1863 for service in California is best illustrated by the following comparison:

The Huntington (now used for historical exhibition purposes only) is 29½ feet in length, and weighs 39,000 pounds. It could haul four small cars up a grade of 26 feet to the mile—a surprising performance in its day!

The Southern Pacific's new giants of the rails are 120 feet long, 16 feet four inches high and each weighs, when loaded, 906,900 pounds. They have individual tractive power of 112,760 pounds.

Ten of the new locomotives, technically described as "single expansion articulated" engines, have been added to the company's motive power equipment on the 139-mile run over the Sierra Nevada Mountains between Roseville, California, and Sparks, Nevada.

To appreciate fully the size and power of the iron steeds just harnessed by Southern Pacific, it must be known that "articulated type" means two separate engines hinged together. So it is a case of two locomotives in one, but operated as a unit.

The new engines, unlike most locomotives, have the cab in front. This arrangement has not been utilized by any other railroad but has been previously employed on a number of Southern Pacific Mallet compounds. Its purpose is to keep the cab clear of smoke and gases while operating through tunnels and snowsheds and to give the enginemen a better view of the track ahead.

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless. Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. —19—

Q. Had you known that this property was to come to you on your uncle's death?

A. It was always understood between us. He had no other heirs. . . .

Q. Had you any previous acquaintance with Mr. Bethel? I mean, before he took your house?

A. None whatever. I never saw him until he came out to take possession. His secretary inspected the house, and negotiations were carried on through my attorney.

Q. In any of your talks with Mr. Bethel, did you gather that he had known Mr. Horace Porter, previous to his death?

A. Never.

Q. When you rented the house, did you retain any keys to it.

A. I have a full set in my possession.

Q. You had access to the house, then?

A. I never used my keys, if that's what you mean.

Q. On the night of the twenty-sixth of July, Mr. Bethel's secretary was attacked outside the kitchen door of the house, and managed to ring the bell before he fell unconscious. Just where were you, Mr. Porter, when that bell rang?

A. The police have my statement as to that. By the sun-dial.

Q. Doctor Hayward was on the road in his car; you were by the sun-dial, close to the house. Yet when he reached you, you had apparently only found this boy. Is that correct?

A. It seems to me that the question there might be, was Hayward on the main road that night, as he says, or nearer to the house than he admits. . . .

Q. You own a boat, I believe?

A. I inherited one with the property. A sloop.

Q. Do you sail the boat yourself?

A. I don't know one end of it from the other. . . .

Q. In your various conversations with Mr. Bethel, did he ever mention the character of the house? By that, I mean any curious quality in the house itself?

A. He recognized such a quality. Yes.

Q. Did he ever mention a letter written by him to a Mr. Cameron, here in the city? A member of the Society for Psychical Research? Relative to the house?

A. Never. But I know of the letter. Cameron sent me word of it a day or so ago.

Q. Are you a believer in spiritualism?

A. I never have been. Recently, however, I—

(Note: Here I caught a warning glance from Halliday and changed what I intended to say.)

Recently I have been trying to preserve an open mind on the subject.

Q. Why recently.

A. For one thing, Mr. Bethel had found the house queer; so had the secretary. . . .

Q. On the day you asked the secretary to luncheon, the intention was to allow Mr. Bethel to go through his room?

A. Bethel? Certainly not.

Q. I shall read you this entry from Gordon's diary (reads): "Porter asked me to lunch today, so B. could go through my room. They left the knife, but at least they know I have it."

A. That's a lie! I asked him to luncheon so Halliday could search his room. It was Halliday who found the knife. You can ask him.

Q. We'll let that go, just now, and come to the night you were found in the house, Mr. Porter, by Mr. Halliday.

A. I wasn't found in the house by Mr. Halliday. We had started for it together. The maid, Annie Cochran, had reported a quarrel between Mr Bethel and Gordon, and that Gordon had gone away. You must remember that we suspected the boy of being the killer. I was anxious, and went for Halliday.

Q. What time did the maid tell you this?

A. About seven thirty, possibly eight o'clock.

Q. And when did you go for Mr. Halliday?

A. It was about eleven, I imagine.

Q. What did you do in the interval?

A. She was nervous, and I took her home. Afterr that we had callers.

Q. Did you see Mr. Bethel, in that interval?

A. No.

Q. Had it occurred to you that Gordon might be going to see the police?

A. I never thought of it. Why should he be going to the police?

Q. Did Mr. Bethel think of it?

A. I've told you; I didn't see him.

Q. On the night of the murder in the house at Twin Hollows, what led you to your discovery of the crime?

A. My wife heard the telephone ring, and I went to it. All three buildings are on one line, and the receiver at the main house was down. I heard a crash, and heavy breathing near the telephone.

Q. That made you suspicious?

A. I had been expecting trouble between Mr. Bethel and Gordon.

Q. Why did you expect trouble?

A. I knew they had quarreled. Mr Bethel had told me that it was he who had struck Gordon, mistaking him for a burglar, and that Gordon suspected it.

Q. When did he tell you that?

A. I don't know exactly. About three days before the murder, I think.

Q. Can you remember the burden of that conversation?

A. Very well. He said that he was suspicious of the boy; that he was weak and vicious, and possibly criminal. He knew he was going out at night. On the night of the twenty sixth of July Gordon was out, and he dragged himself downstairs. When he heard him at the kitchen door he struck him. But he maintained that he had not tied him. I believe that personally. He had one useless hand.

Q. Did you ever have any reason to believe that Mr. Bethel exaggerated his infirmity?

A. Exaggerated it? What do you mean?

Q. You believe he was as helpless as he appeared?

A. I can't imagine a man assuming such a thing.

Q. Now, Mr. Porter, you have said that the telephone receiver at the main house was down, and you heard over it enough to alarm you?

A. Yes.

Q. It rang, and you went to it?

A. Yes.

Q. How could it ring, if the other receiver was down?

A. As a matter of fact, I didn't hear it. My wife said it had rung, and to satisfy her I went to it.

Q. Did the secretary, Gordon, ever approach you on a matter of money?

A. Money? I don't understand the question.

Q. Did he ever ask you for money? Or intimate that he needed it?

A. Never. He said something once about giving up his position. . . .

Q. Where was he, the night you held the conversation with Mr. Bethel, relative to him?

A. Here in the city, I believe.

Q. And Mr. Bethel thought he might have gone to the police.

A. That's the second time you have intimated that Gordon had something to tell the police. I can't talk in the dark like this. If anybody wanted to avoid the police, it was this boy.

Q. I am going back to the night Mr. Halliday found you in the house—

A. He didn't find me. We had started there together.

Q. You say you saw a figure at the foot of the stairs, and fired at it?

A. I didn't intend to fire.

Q. You didn't recognize this figure?

A. No.

Q. It was not Mr. Bethel?

A. Bethel? No. He was locked in his room. . . .

Q. You say you are not a spiritualist?

A. Certainly not.

Q. You have never made any experiments in spiritualism?

A. I have been present at one or two seances.

Q. When? Recently?

A. We have held two sittings in the main house within the last few days.

Q. When did you first hear of the symbol of a triangle inside a circle?

A. If you mean in connection with the crimes—

Q. Before that. You told Mr. Greenough, some time ago, that you heard of it in some other connection.

A. I told him I had happened on it in an old book on Black Magic, and told a group of women about it. It was a purely facetious remark.

Q. Can you account for its use in connection with these crimes?

A. I have no official knowledge that it was used in connection with the crimes. Only with the sheep-killing?

Q. But you know it was so used?

A. I know that it was used once when Mr. Greenough did not find it.

Q. Where was that?

A. On a tree near where the Morrison truck was discovered. I have heard it was on Carroway's boat, but I don't know that. I know it was deliberately put on my car, after Mr. Halliday was hurt.

Q. You say, put on the car? Do you mean by that, Mr. Bethel did it?

A. Bethel? How could he? We have thought lately that Gordon was responsible. We found a piece of his cipher nearby.

Q. You have felt all along that Gordon was guilty?

A. I won't say that. I would say that the burden of the evidence indicated that he was guilty. Mr. Halliday has had considerable doubt of his guilt.

Q. Have you ever considered that it might be Bethel who killed Gordon?

A. Never. He couldn't have done it.

Q. But if he had had assistance?

A. Are you telling me that Bethel did kill Gordon?

Q. I am telling you that somebody killed Gordon, Mr. Porter. His body was washed ashore at Bass cove this morning.

September 7.

Halliday has saved me from arrest, by giving to the police the information which he has been gathering on the case all summer. Has made a quiet gesture, which is like him, and given me back to life, liberty and the pursuit of literature.

He came out late last night, and I understand is still asleep. He has had very little sleep, poor lad, for a long time.

I myself collapsed this morning, and Hayward has put me back to bed. Edith, spreading my coverings neatly before Greenough came up, says I am now so thin that:

"You really make a hollow, William. If it were not for your feet, nobody would know you are there!"

It is impossible to record in detail my conversation this afternoon with Greenough, covering as it did more than an hour. He came in, I thought, slightly uncomfortable, and perhaps a little crestfallen, and I motioned him to a chair. He sat down and mopped his face with his handkerchief, and after that stooped and rather deliberately wiped his shoes with it. Then he straightened and looked at me.

"Well, professor," he said, "it's a darned queer world, there's no denying it."

"The world's all right. It's the people who mess things up."

"Like fleas on a dog," was his rather abstracted comment. He felt in his pocket, with much the same gesture as on that early visit of his when he had drawn the triangle within the circle on the back of an old envelope. Whether the movement was reminiscent to him, as it was to me, I cannot say. But he glanced at me quickly and then smiled.

"Sort of had me going, you did, there for a while!" he said. "But I was getting pretty close to the facts before this diary came along. Of course, it helped."

He had Gordon's diary in his hand.

"Naturally," he said, fingering the book, "your young friend's information was valuable; I'm not discounting that. The hand-print on the window board, for instance. I'd have found it sooner or later, but it saved time. And the young lady, too. She's done her bit, all right. I've been handicapped by being too well known around here. And Starr's a fool."

He snapped out this last statement, and I gathered that he was still smarting under the knowledge that, without Halliday and Edith, he would still be nowhere. It was, more or less, his defense.

"Of course," he said, "ever since we got hold of this diary of Gordon's, one thing's been pretty clear. Bethel wasn't working alone. According to what I saw of him it wasn't possible. He couldn't even have made a getaway without help. The only question was, who'd helped him."

Dared Bethel to Discharge Him.

"So you picked on me?"

"Well," he said wryly, "you'll have to admit that you've seemed to go out of your way all summer to get into trouble! As a matter of fact, I didn't pick on you; it was Gordon." He looked at my clock.

"I've only got an hour," he said. "Your niece is sitting on the stairs now, holding a stop-watch on me. I can't read you this thing, but I can tell you what's in it. And believe me, that's plenty." . . .

Briefly, then, the deciphering of the diary had left me in a very bad position. When they had finished it, it was Benchley's idea to arrest me at once. They had the boy's body, a fact they had kept to themselves, and I was within an ace of a charge of murder.

But Halliday had stayed.

"He seemed to feel there was trouble coming," Greenough said. "He hung around and drove us all crazy. He insisted, as he'd brought the key, on his right to read the stuff as it came through; and as it went on, he didn't know exactly what to do.

"Finally, seeing what was in the air, he made a trade with us. He was willing to have you brought in and interrogated, but on condition that if you weren't held he'd come over with something of his own. You get the point, of course. There's a reward involved, and he'd been holding out on us a bit." He waved his hand. "That's natural. We don't hold it against him. But the point is, he made his trade."

Coming to my examination, my answers had apparently impressed Hemingway satisfactorily. On the other hand, added to the diary's constant suspicion of me, was Greenough's own case against me. He passed over that rather airily.

"I wasn't trying to make out a case against you," he said. "As a matter of fact, you couldn't have been the man who attacked Halliday. You weren't here."

"Naturally," I agreed, gravely. "I wasn't here. Of course, if I had been here—!"

He glanced at me quickly, but went back to the night of the inquiry.

"The question was, whether to hold you or not. You may remember Hemingway going out, when it was over, and talking to Halliday outside? Well, it was then he made the trade."

Apparently the fact that Gordon had been the victim had not been the surprise to the police that it had been to me. For one thing, the microscope had shown one detail which the detective had not mentioned to me at the time. Caught between the handle of the knife and the blade had been a short piece of hair. The microscope showed this hair not only young, a matter readily determined, and the approximate color of Gordon's; it also showed it liberally coated with pomade. Poor Gordon's glistening, varnished hair!

But Greenough had been inclined at first to think that there had been two victims, instead of one.

"Dying and passing on," he says, "is not like taking your thumb out of a bowl of soup. It's bound to leave some sort of a hole."

And there had been no hole. If Bethel had died and passed on, no one apparently missed him. As time went on and no queries were received, the thing began to look ominous; as though Bethel himself had been hiding away, under an assumed name.

"But," he said, with engaging frankness, "that eliminated you. And you wouldn't be eliminated. You were like some people you've seen, when there's a camera man about; always getting in front of the machine and into the picture."

Then came the diary, and Gordon brought me in unmistakably, and in a way they had not thought of. Not an enemy, but an accomplice; Bethel hiding there, with my connivance, and the two of us, he the brains presumably and I the hands, working out between us some sinister design which even the boy could not understand.

"Whatever it is," Gordon had written, shortly after the Morrison girl's disappearance, "he's got outside help." And he wonders if I am guilty. But he is not sure of that; he even suspects Bethel, in one entry, of being less helpless than he appeared, and possibly of "working on his own." He abandoned that idea, however, and there was a time when he suspected Thomas; even a time when he thought of bringing his suspicions to me.

But Bethel was beginning to be afraid of him. He thinks Bethel knows he has discovered the boat. He grows alarmed, and buys a knife; he records that "he can take care of himself." But there is bravado in it. Later on, he finds that he is occasionally stealthily locked in at night, for three or four hours, and he buys a rope and hides it in his room.

He found the gun-room window unlocked on certain nights, and set a watch on it. And on one such night Bethel tried to kill him.

"He tried to kill me last night," he writes on the 27th of July, and goes on to say that Bethel couldn't have tied him, and that "maybe it was Porter." From that time on he suspected me.

And Bethel was watching him. Nothing is so dramatic in all the diary as the situation unconsciously revealed between the paralytic and the boy; each watching the other, the guard up between them, while the servant is in the room, and then down again. The boy recklessly mocking, the old man grim and waiting.

And nothing said. The boy goes to the city and tries to buy a revolver, but there is a new law in effect, and he fails. He has the knife, and has to trust to that. He thinks of going to the police while he is in the city; the reward would be a big thing. He says: "I could go around the world on ten thousand." But his case isn't complete; he needs the outside man. He suspects me, but he "hasn't the goods" on me.

And there are times when he admits the possibility that I may not be the outside man. One night he hears the unknown in the house. There is a reddish glare and he sees a figure steal into the den. But it "did not look like Porter." And he is more puzzled than ever, for Bethel is in his room, asleep, and although the boy camps on the stairs until daylight, he does not see the figure again.

"At daylight examined den and library. All windows closed and locked. It beats me."

It is about this time, too, that he begins to believe that Bethel is not only watching him, but that he is expecting trouble from some other source. He tells Bethel he has seen a figure go into the den at night, and Bethel shows alarm.

"He and the other one have quarreled," he says. "And B.'s afraid of him."

But on the night when he came home, to find Starr, Halliday and myself in the house, his suspicions of me returned in full force. He decides that Bethel and I have had a quarrel, and that one of us has tried to shoot the other! But his knife has been taken; he steals one from the kitchen and carefully sharpens it; but he is not so frightened as he has been. Bethel and I have quarreled, and he "can handle the old man."

But matters were rapidly approaching a climax. Bethel was going to give up the house and let him go. He seems to have dared Bethel to discharge him, and to have more than hinted at what he suspects.

"I can talk for ten thousand," he writes, "or keep quiet for twenty. He can take his choice."

He has the upper hand, now. The other man is no longer in evidence; they have apparently quarreled, and Bethel is left to bear the situation alone. The boy lays various traps, but no one enters the house. "The murder pact" is broken, and the old man sits in his chair and broods.

"Blackmail is an ugly word," he says once.

"Not half so ugly as murder," retorts Gordon, and notes it with satisfaction in his diary.

"Murder" was the last word he wrote there. . . .

But, for all his apparent frankness, Greenough's errand was clearly only to relieve my anxieties concerning myself. He refused all further information.

"We have a suspect, all right," he said. "I don't mind saying that. But we haven't a case yet, and it's touch and go whether we get one. Until we do, we're not talking."

September 8.

Halliday's attitude is very curious. He is taciturn in the extreme; he avoids any confidential talks with me, and Jane commented on it this morning.

"He worries me," she said, "and he is worrying Edith. If you go out now and look, you'll see him pacing the boathouse veranda, and he has been doing it for the last hour."

I admit that he puzzles me. It was Greenough's errand, so far as I can make out, to relieve my mind as to myself, but to treat Halliday's case, as given to the police, as entirely confidential.

"It's the outside man we are after," he said; "and the outside man we are going to get."

But on my mentioning my right to know who was under suspicion, he only repeated what the detective had said.

"You understand," he said, "there's no case in law yet. Knowing who did a thing, and proving who did it, are different things entirely."

ATWATER KENT RADIO

"I know that man—that is exactly the way he talks"

SHE was listening to a demonstration of an Atwater Kent. Turning the FULL-VISION Dial from one station to another, suddenly she heard the voice of a friend she had not seen for years. She listened eagerly. It was "exactly the way he talked."

"I'll take the set," she said. "This radio tells the truth."

Anyone can convince himself that Atwater Kent receivers and speakers do give faithful reproduction. Listen to an orchestra and pick out the individual instruments. Each has its own character—its own identity.

Turn to a male quartet, a piano solo, a radio drama with all the varying voices and inflections—or to the President when he speaks. Every sound is true to the original. That is the standard of Atwater Kent performance.

Atwater Kent gives it to you for less money. Less money because Atwater Kent Radio is manufactured in great quantities, making economies of production possible. Yet this huge output does not affect quality in the slightest. For every set, besides being made of the finest materials, has to pass 222 tests or inspections in the course of manufacture.

Canada is achieving a reputation as the playground for the whole world. Big game hunters formerly went to Africa for their thrills, but now many of them go to Canada. This is true, also, of those who go in search of smaller game and mountain climbers and even "hikers." It is estimated that visitors to Canada last year spent $275,000,000 during their sojourning in that country.

Filipinos Fear Visit of Headless Spook

Many Filipono homes are now marked with a white cross as a precaution against a visit from three alleged, black-robed, headless sisters.

The story of the headless sisters, who are called the Tatlong Marias or Three Marys, began to circulate during the early autumn. It spread rapidly, and fully 75 per cent of the homes were marked with crosses.

Those who marked their doors said that the sisters made nightly calls, and that the person who answered their knock at the door was stricken with a fatal illness. But if a white cross were upon the doors there was no visitation.

Most of the crosses were drawn with white chalk, but some were painted, and a few made with flowers. The story of the three sisters has curbed neighborly visits in the evening.

Lighthouse Innovation

In 1862 an arc lamp was installed in a lighthouse at Dungeness, England, and supplied with current from a cumbrous magneto-electric machine. This was the first regular electric light in service.

Throwing Stones Into an Ant Heap

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Man began his philosophizing very early in his development in civilization. He saw centuries ago the fatal results of hasty, unpremeditated action, and he felt the pain which comes from impulsive yielding to temptation.

"I threw a stone into an ant heap" the African said to express the often overwhelming results of an untoward action. The ants would go about their business if left undisturbed, but throw a stone into their habitation and the great savage insects would rush out into a body to tear the flesh from your bones. He paid dearly who threw a stone into an ant heap.

We have the expression in our own vernacular "Stir up a hornet's nest," which connotes about the same thing. The hornet's nest was a very interesting looking object as it hung on the bough of a tree above our heads. It was made of dark gray paper, sometimes it was as big as one's head, and there were little holes in the under side of it through which the little innocent insects went in and out in attending upon their daily duties. I used to wonder what was really going on inside, and what sort of domestic or business affairs could possibly keep the hornets in such a constant state of agitation.

"You'd better keep away from it," mother used to warn us when we told her that we had discovered a hornet's nest in a tree down on the south pasture. "You'll get stung the first thing you know, and then you won't think it so funny."

We wondered; and one day Gene McGinnis decided he'd take a chance. It was a very foolish conclusion on his part. The whole family of hornets rushed out and began work on him, and when they were through Gene's own mother would not have recognized him.

We are constantly throwing stones into ant heaps or stirring up hornet's nests, and the consequences are too often far more disastrous than we anticipated. It takes a long time to learn judgment; sometimes we never learn it, and there is a hornet's nest stirred up about us most of the time.

I had pointed out to me a few weeks ago as I was passing through a town in a neighboring state, the home of a former governor of the state. The house in which he was living had been pretentious in its day but it was run down now and ill-kept. The owner had been prominent, prosperous and respected. He was looked upon as a man to be taken as an example for young men to follow. But he threw a stone into an ant heap. He grew ambitious; he began speculating with money that was not his, he finally became criminally involved in the use of funds which were placed in his hands and was tried and sent to the penitentiary. He has served his term, but he is broken, his reputation gone, and he is reaping as we all do, the harvest of the foolish deed which he committed.

The greatest factor in the progress of life was undoubtedly when the prehistoric sea creatures left water for future existence on land. # Schools for Flyers

New York.—A chain of aviation schools, with fields and instructors in strategically located cities in all parts of the country, is one of the major developments in American aerial progress to be expected in 1929 according to Amelia Earhart, first woman to fly the Atlantic, and now aviation editor of Cosmopolitan.

The schools, which will offer complete courses in flying to sportsmen and women as well as those training for commercial flying, will be sponsored by one of the principal companies now operating commercial air lines, she says.

The price of learning to handle a plane already has dropped to an average of $250 in the established flying schools, as a result of the increased interest in flying among people in all walks of life and the development of a large body of competent instructors within the past two years, Miss Earhart finds, surveying the rapid changes in aviation in the current issue of the magazine. At the end of the World war no air training could be obtained for less than $1,000, but recently the fee has twice been cut in half. Today the cost is hardly more than the fee of a first-class dancing instructor, since the $250 covers 10 to 12 hours of actual flying, spread over 20 to 25 lessons.

Miss Earhart, however, warns prospective amateur flyers against the "barnstorming" flying instructor and the poorly equipped and inefficiently operated school.

"There are excellent flying schools and excellent private instructors in the country, but it still is difficult to distinguish the good from the bad," says her Cosmopolitan article. "It is the opinion of many flyers that the Department of Commerce should make a classification similar to that of the American Medical association, which gives its approval after inspection to hospitals which maintain certain standards. Given time, flying schools will acquire reputations, but it might be easier for students if there were a published rating now. One distinguishing mark, however, is already available. You can be sure the planes used are licensed by the Department of Commerce. And be sure that they are inspected frequently.

"The student also should have a physical examination, paying special attention to the eyesight, by a Department of Commerce physician."

Deity in Knickers Resented at Theater

Frankfurt-Am-Main, Germany.—Public objection to representation of the Deity on the stage took a drastic form at the Municipal theater recently when a production of Walter Hasenclever's comedy, "Mariages Are Made in Heaven," provoked a bombardment of vile-smelling bombs and tear-gas grenades.

The company finished the play to an empty house. Police ejected several disturbers. This caused free-for-all fighting in the street outside.

The play, in which the Deity was represented as wearing golf clothes and knickerbockers, had previously caused a scandal in Berlin, Hamburg and other German cities.

Electricity Now Runs World's Oldest Clock

Rouen, France.—The world's oldest clock, built in 1389, today ticks by electricity.

Not only does electricity run the clock, but it also rings Rouen's historic curfew, "Cache Ribaud," which was instituted by William the Conqueror and which for nearly eight centuries has sounded at nine o'clock each night the warning to all to return to their homes and put out their lights.

For even the Rouen clock could not operate forever on its old machinery. The bulky wheels and weights ran the clock for more than 500 years before they recently collapsed under the strain and appealed for help.

So an expert in electrical clocks was called in. He tore out the antiquated works and substituted a small, black box. This box now not only operates the clock, but also rings the curfew.

The clock has only one hand—never has had another. But the great copper dial bears minute graduations and the machinery causes the chimes to strike every 15 minutes, as well as on the hour.

A welcome addition to the youngest set in the national capital is Miss Marie Larrazolo, daughter of the new senator from New Mexico, A. Larrazolo.

Connecticut Churches Tax Exempt 200 Years

Hartford, Conn.—The system of freeing religious bodies from taxation has rounded out two centuries in Connecticut and is beginning a third.

Church of England churches in the Connecticut colony were granted exemption for taxation in 1727. A few years later the Baptists and Quakers also were exempted.

It is now 220 years since provision was made for dissenters from the established church. The general court in 1768 granted permission for the Presbyterian system of church government to be used by churches that dissented from the Church of England.

Stick to the Pinto

Dallas, Texas.—Railroad development in Texas has kept step in recent years with the state's march of progress in an agricultural and mineral way, yet so vast has been a last frontier of southwestern border counties that eight still await the steel rails that will bring to the region a fast and uninterrupted transportation it has never known.

The group where the automobile and pinto pony are still the only means of conveyance embrace an area fifteen times as large as Rhode Island, but the population in this undeveloped section is only one-seventh of that of Providence, capital of that state.

So great are distances from some of the cattle ranches that it is necessary to drive stock more than eighty miles to a railroad for shipment to packing houses or the feed lots of the corn belt.

Although much of the region still is largely in a pastoral state, due to the scarcity of rainfall and ownership of land in tracts too large for development, it is the center of the country's best wool and mohair area and the breeding ground for thousands of cattle each year. Oil resources have been developed in Crane county only, but land prices and bank deposits have risen rapidly since the World war.

Live stock values in Crockett county exceed those of any other county in Texas, and Edward county, one of the group, leads the country in the number of goats raised annually.

Transportation companies have watched with interest this domain and plans have been discussed for an extension that will connect at least four counties—Mason, Kimble, Sutton and Crockett—with the outside world. A road also has been proposed for Edwards county, but for several years Glassock, Crane and Bandera probably will not witness what would be the novel sight of a locomotive rumbling across the region.

America Leads World in Making Timepieces

New York.—Watches and clocks produced in the United States this year will have a value in excess of $80,000,000, almost equal to the combined output of Switzerland and Germany, the closest competitors.

Production of timepieces in this country, jewelers say, has more than doubled in the last ten years. After meeting its own domestic demand, the United States last year, exported watches and clocks to the value of 4 per cent of the total output, an increase of 6 per cent over the previous year.

Burned Their Dead

Minneapolis, Minn.—Evidence that prehistoric dwellers on the North American continent were the first of mankind to cremate the dead has been unearthed by an expedition of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts.

The evidence is based chiefly upon a crumbly material found in the sands of the Mimbres valley in New Mexico, thought to have been pulverized corn, which an analysis showed was bone ash.

The culture of the Mimbres valley is believed to have flourished 2,000 years ago.

Objects and materials found certainly are the first evidence of cremation in that valley, and possibly anywhere, says Dr. Albert E. Jenks, leader of the expedition. Doctor Jenks believes Mimbres culture ceased to exist about 600 or 700 A. D.

Near Hurley, N. M., the searchers unearthed a village of 150 rooms, or huts. Some yielded sitting, or full-length skeletons with bowls over their heads. But in one was found a jar of an unrecognized material.

"We tasted it," said Doctor Jenks. "One member of the party declared the material was pulverized blue corn, common in that vicinity." Laboratory tests revealed it to be bone ash.

Another find deemed important was a copper bell, use of which previously had not been known. A bracelet of 13 shells was found on the arm of the skeleton of a female.

There were fireplaces and wall bases of adobe and stone. Some huts were constructed of wood.

The culture, according to anthropologists, disappeared when Mimbres villages were destroyed, although how they were destroyed has not been learned. So far as is known the culture never took root elsewhere.

Attributes Long Life to Horizontal Position

Vienna.—A certain Dr. Julius Tichwehr who recently died here at the age of one hundred nine, often declared that the secret of his longevity consisted in taking a horizontal position as often as possible during the day, and naturally, every night.

Whenever it was possible throughout the day, he would place his head in the direction of the North pole and the remainder of his body parallel to the meridian line.

The doctor affirmed that this position coresponded to the direction of the magnetic current running through the surface of the earth and thus permitted a kind of magnetism of the iron mass contained in the body.

Highly Praised Design for Air Field

An aerial perspective of the "Triarc" landing field conceived by Gavin Hadden, New York engineer, whose advantages over circular and triangular designs are expected to win it universal adoption by airport constructors, owing to its great economy of space and of runway paving. In this perspective of a 12-way field with perimeter paved for taxiing purposes, the unpaved circles at the intersections are 40 feet across.

Harold's Mother Knew Answer

"Yes, sir, I am certainly proud of my little boy," says Mrs. H. M. Smith, 421 Topeka Ave., Topeka, Kansas. "He's five and weighs fifty-seven pounds. He's the picture of health as you can see, and I feel like he'll always be that way as long as I can get California Fig Syrup. I have used it with him ever since he was a year old. I knew what to give him for his colds and his feverish, upset spells because Mother used California Fig Syrup with all of us as children. I have used it freely with my boy and he loves it. It always fixes him up, quick."

In many homes, like this, the third and fourth generations are using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup because it has never failed to do what is expected of it. Nothing so quickly and thoroughly purges a child's system of the souring waste which keeps him cross, feverish, headachy, bilious, half-sick, with coated tongue, bad breath and no appetite or energy as long as it is allowed to remain in the little stomach and bowels. Fig Syrup gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act as Nature intends them to do, and helps build up and strengthen weak, pale and underweight children. Over four million bottles used a year shows its popularity. The genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years, always bears the word "California."

To forget a wrong is true revenge.

Boy Hurt When Struck by Auto

While riding his bicycle on the state highway at Jefferson avenue Wednesday, John Bogle, 13, collided with a car driven by J. L. Pipkin. The boy, who is a pupil of the McKinley school, lived with his parents in Dumbarton Oaks. He is now at the Redwood City hospital under the care of Dr. Harper Peddicord. His condition is still serious but hope is held for his recovery.

Governor Opposes School Law Change

By Capitol News Bureau

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 10—The county school unit plan apparently is dead for this session of the Legislature.

Such, at least, was the victory claimed today by the opponents of the measure designed to bring all the schools of a county under one school board and in one district.

Governor Young siding with the County School Superintendents' Association advised the 1929 Legislature that it should authorize a thorough investigation of the school situation before making any drastic changes. That is practically the identical recommendation made by R. E. Bolway, Sacramento County Superintendent of Schools, and legislative chairman of the state association.

State Subsidy Planned for Aged

By Capitol News Bureau

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 10—San Mateo County will be assisted in the care of its needy aged persons by a state subsidy similar to the present orphan aid, it was indicated today, following the presentation of the need for such cooperation to the 1929 Legislature by Governor Young.

As the result of an investigation into the desirability of establishing an old age pension scheme in California, the Governor recommended that the legislators submit to the voters of the state a constitutional amendment authorizing aid for the aged.

Governor Young declared: "California has a splendid record of success with state aid for orphans. I trust you will give most sympathetic consideration to the extension of state aid, in cooperation with the counties, for the indigent aged, and the necessary constitutional and financial provisions to put it into ef-

Sequoia To Play San Mateo Here

The first league game to be played on the home court by the 30's and unlimiteds will occur this Friday night at 7:45, when the Cherokees play the San Mateo hoopsters. Because of the creditable showing made by the 30's and varsity against the Palo Alto boys last Friday night, much enthusiasm is being created in regards to the coming game, and Coach Griffin has been giving his men stiff workouts during the past week, so that the boys will not become stale.

It has been voiced by several of the "high and mighties" that it will take a good team to beat the 30's, and anyone who has seen the middleweights play will agree. The team is composed of vets from many successful basketball teams, including "Ike" Britschgi, Jack Morgan, Clarence tSillson, George Shine, and several other fast men.

While no opinions have been formed as yet in regards to the San Mateo game, the general attitude is one that a stiff and fast game can be expected, both from our 30's and our unlimiteds.

The game will be held on the Sequoia court, and the regular admission of 25 cents will be asked.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

GIRLS DRESSMAKING CONTEST

In a national contest held recently, three Sequoia maidens won honors that again contribute to the high standing already accorded to the high school. Dressmaking was the subject of the contest, and out of the five special mentions accorded to the whole territory of the United States, two were won by Cherokees.

Three ribbons and one honorable mention with a prize, the identity of which is still unknown, comprise the rest of the awards taken by the Sequoians.

The contest, sponsored by the Butterick magazine, was held in New York, and the contestants have been working on their contributions since October 10.

Virginia Anderson, with a green flannel and taffeta dress as her contribution, won honorable mention and a prize, while Frances Ridge, with a blue crepe satin dres, and Fern Wong, with a blue and tan flat crepe dress, won special mention.

The contestants were required to submit dresses made according to specified Butterick patterns, individuality and originality in the organization of the patterns being the prime factors by which the offerings were judged.

The three students representing Sequoia were selected by means of an elimination contest, in which townspeople judged the dresses, and for which prizes of $10 for the first place, $6 for the second, and $4 for the third were offered by Mr. Hearne of the Hearne Dry Goods Company.
